Dear Parent/Carer,

RE: Royal Society of Biology Drawing Competition

We have an exciting opportunity for all students to be involved in The Nancy Rothwell Award, a competition hosted by the Royal Society of Biology. This competition gives students the opportunity to create a drawing based on animal anatomy, which aims to increase student engagement in science through art.

Your child has already created a drawing, and has been chosen to enter the official competition. In order to enter your child we will be required to provide their full name, age and school email address. This information will be used to create an account with the Royal Society of Biology, through which they will enter the competition online in school. All entrants will have an opportunity to win £25 and a set of colouring pencils. Highly commended entrants will also have the opportunity to attend a virtual experience day hosted by the Royal Veterinary College London.

To find out more about the competition you can visit the website linked below:

If you are happy for your child's design to be entered, please complete the consent form below.

Yours sincerely,

Miss Williams
